Dear Darla

Got paper? I'm excited to offer a one-night tell-all on how to organize your paper. On May 22, I'll be presenting in Plymouth Meeting at the lovely Community Center next door to the mall. Every guest will receive one of my very favorite organizing tools- a Password Organizer!- and a gift bag with some of my favorite items. But you must register to attend this one night class. Will you join us?

Remember last month's teaser picture?

Despite the dated, worn and mismatched look, we achieved a coordinated, colorful, and bright design, that people couldn't wait to sit in. Check out the AFTER here.

Keep reading for another before and after transformation,

What people one guy said about the Filing Freedom class:

Hey I just wanted to let you know that your class and this filing system is one of the best things I have ever invested in myself! I think everyone should have to take this class before they graduate high school. The system totally works and is so simple and easy to use as well as flexible to adapt to individual needs within the well thought out framework provided. I now have much more time now available for me to do the things I enjoy and it keeps getting better and better every day that I use the system!

Speaking of Before & After, have you seen my pretty new website? I'm not sure if it looks a lot different to you, but now I can offer weekly giveaways. Check my latest posts for cool organizing stuff you can win and recent winners. If you see anything on the site that could work better for you, I'm all ears.

This summer, I'm going back to my roots. I'll be taking the Filing Freedom clutter support group on the road in June in Bristol, Indiana. If you haven't already, please register now. Registration will close early June, so don't be shut out.

Sincerely,

What's the best way to get your house clean? Throw a party!

OK, so this isn't actually my house; it's my garage. Yes, we actually park in there. Yes, we store our kid stuff and gardening gear in there. When I suggested that we throw the party in our 100 year-old garage, my husband said, "Ew, what a bad idea."

I would have liked to have had a bit more time to make a few more home improvements, but after a year in print, I really thought it was high time to celebrate the publication of my first book.

So we sent the invitations, bought the food and drinks, and had a party in the garage. Trust me, no one notices the floor when there's a crowd and there's a drink in your hand.

Those little cuties hanging from the ceiling are the summer party's best accessory. You can see more about these adorable paper lanterns (and their little secret) by clicking here. I especially love how they mostly camouflaged the mountain bikes hanging from the ceiling.

Since it can't be a party without a cake, we had one of those, too. Isn't it pretty?

There will be a few posts coming up about my super simple and thrifty guest gifts, table decorations and other party organizing tricks that kept me on budget and sane in the days leading up to our little fete. If you aren't already signed up to receive weekly design and organizing articles from me, hop on over and do it now to get inspiration for your summer party.

Thanks to all who came and contributed, including my favorite beverage, Bai drinks. With great fruit taste, antioxidants, and caffeine from the coffee fruit, they make one happening cocktail!

I hope that you are inspired to roll out the party gear for some backyard hospitality in your neck of the woods.
