BOO!: October 2013

Dear Darla,

Thank you for faithfully reading this newsletter. I've heard lately from so many people who enjoy the content and information. I really do try to keep them short and snappy, so both you and I can be out enjoying the things that we love. I mean, really, a romp in the leaves is so much more fun than reading a newsletter!

Tip:

Stressing about holiday toy clutter already? Starting now, hide 1 toy per kid each week. If they don't ask for it the next 8 weeks, donate it without the drama, and you'll have some space cleared for incoming gifts.

Fondly,

Darla DeMorrow

BOO! Now that wasn't so scary, was it?

A few times each year I get the privilege of hosting a great group of people to tackle organizing in a group format. We just finished the Clutter Support Group last week. I am constantly amazed at the wonderful people I get to work with, and the progress that we are able to make together.

This time around, over the course of 4 meetings in just 3 short weeks, here's what we tackled:

- A basement
- 3 home offices
- a filing system (that will move to a home office)
- kitchen cabinets
- closets
- a batch of photos
- a craft room
- a hallway (and a garage as a bonus!)
- a wardrobe
- and a batch of keepsakes from an estate

I'm so very proud of these folks, who took care of something that's been on their minds (and desks and counters and floors) for years in some cases! They are headed into a hectic time of the year with a big success behind them, and feeling just a little bit lighter.

I'm not quite ready to announce my 2014 class lineup just yet, but if you are interested in a particular topic, I'd love it if you'd drop me a line.

Need a reason to connect with me via the blog, facebook, and twitter? DEALS! I love to share valuable deals and gifts from me and others. This month already I've told you about free knife sharpening and a free photo album, as well as countless other tricks
