Collections & Hobbies

Cindy Crawford does scrap booking. Who knew? Even the busiest person I know has some hobby. One of the most frequent questions I get asked is how to control the space that a hobby takes up. It may not be easy, but now's the perfect time to tackle that project, so you can actually get to your projects!

Consider This:

Although traditional, it is no less true...I am thankful for my family, the many blessings God has bestowed upon us, and YOU. Thank you for allowing me to organize your stuff and beautify your homes. Every day is a holiday when I get to work with you and get to know you a little better.

Stuff We Keep

First, imagine your life in the future. Not the fantasy, unlimited-time-and-money kind of future, but your actual future in the next one-to-six months. Are you living in the same home? With whom? Doing what job? Are you making any changes that would lead to a different outcome? From that, determine whether there is time and space for your hobbies.

If it is time to say goodbye to this particular hobby, do so without regret. You've enjoyed it for a while. This life offers so many wonderful experiences. There's a new one waiting for you.

If you keep it, commit to working on it every day, week, month, or whatever you decide. If you can find time to honor your dreams, then those dreams deserve the space they take up.

Use collections and hobbies as a way to develop relationships. Is your husband's hobby something you could learn more about? Have you ever wanted to pass on your knitting skills to a niece or girlfriend? Life is short. Make it happen.

Put down that credit card! Reward yourself with special storage solutions ONLY after to renew your commitment to the hobby.
