Dear Darla

My 5 year old's homework from kindergarten this week was to decorate a construction paper turkey "feather" with things that make our family unique. This was a difficult project for her, since she kept confusing unique with thankful. Maybe she wasn't really so far off base. She ended up with:

- a warm couch where we like to read books (that's the blob in the middle that she drew)
- a pretty Hello Kitty sticker
- a sticker from Sesame Place (their Very Furry Christmas starts this weekend!)
- two horses like Grandpa's
- a Jesus, Redeemer sticker, in purple, one of our favorite colors
- and Ariel, the mermaid, because we love princesses and we like swimming you? Please email or call about how we can make that happen.

...for it all

I probably don't have to tell you that it's been a very, very busy news cycle this last month. In my own way, I try to bring you some good news each month.

If you can get on Facebook sometime today, please enter my flash contest celebrating something good in your life. All you have to do to enter is upload your favorite photo from this last year. One winner will receive a framed custom photo gift, with 3-D, hand-fashioned scrapbook quality embellishments to feature your favorite memory. These treasures from Forever Moments are perfect gifts, of course. In addition to the one winner, I'll be giving a super huge discount code to up to 5 people. What I love about this gift is that all you have to do is pick a great photo (hint: it's probably on your phone's screen saver), and you get a perfect present like this (not my kids, but still cute)-

Still blown away by the storm damage on the east coast from Hurricane Sandy? It's super easy to make a difference. Visit the Red Cross to schedule your blood donation appointment online today.

Another piece of good news is the progress that the participants of the 20/20 Virtual Clutter Support Group are making. I'm thrilled to share that we have participants from across the country-and their cats- hunkering down to finish their projects by Thanksgiving weekend. We'll definitely do this again when I startup classes again next year.

I'm also grateful that so many people trust me and my team to help them enjoy their lives and homes more. Your stories of transformation are inspiring. I know you enjoyed the living room-to-den transformation I shared last month. Here's another amazing story. When there is a major life change or the loss of a family member, it can seem overwhelming. But in about three hours, we were able to uncover a living room here, schedule a charity donation pickup that happened later that week, and help this homeowner enjoy his space again.

Thanks.
