Fried Chicken & Catfish at NAPO2016

There are few things more frustrating than trying to summarize 4 days of conference onto a quarter page. The National Association of Professional Organizers (NAPO) annual conference in Atlanta was one of the highlights of my year. But what's in it for you?

We're bringing back new tools from conference, such as comprehensive digital household surveys, to protect your family and home in good times and bad.

We're adding more flexible tactics in for complex families, such as striving for increased curiosity, "Yes, And," and understanding of motivation (or lack of...) in ADHD clients.

We're helping you work through a digital estate plan, and sharing best practices on a digital afterlife and the here & now.

We're queuing up articles on hot topics, like time management and taming technology, for the blog.

Sadly, I couldn't bring home the fried chicken and catfish that we we enjoyed in the heart of the American south, but I highly recommend you look up some for yourself at Pitty Pat's Porch.

If you're interested in a peek at what goes on when 500 professional organizers get together, search #NAPO2016 on Twitter. If you find a favorite nugget, I hope you'll share it with me. There's so much to learn from each other.

If you are looking for a way to honor today's holiday AND get organized, read to the bottom of the Memorial Day article below.
